Notice Board

CHAPLAIN'S CHAT PART TWO

Children need to be and feel SAFE. Unfortunately, in our world today there are many places where the safety of children is a real concern. One of these places is the Internet and parents need to be aware of the real dangers associated with children going online and using the internet.

Six Reasons Why the Internet Can Be Dangerous for Children and Teens. Below are reasons 4-6, last fortnight we discussed reasons 1-3.

4. Not All Information Is Private. Unfortunately, many individuals, including both children and parents, do not know that the information that is posted online isn't always private. For starters, most teens have profiles set to public, as opposed to private. This means that anyone can view it. There are also online message boards that are indexed by the search engines. This means that others can view the conversations that were discussed, even years down the road and with parental controls set up, your child can easily access any type of website with a standard internet search.

5. They Are In Control. When your child uses the internet, they are the ones who are in control. This can be okay if your child is older and mature, but you honestly never know. You may ask your child not to communicate with strangers online, give out their phone numbers, or share pictures with strangers, but that doesn't mean that they will follow your rules. For that reason, if you do let your child use the internet, be sure to monitor their use.

6. The Reality of Cyberbullying. As in the school playground, bullying behaviour can also occur on the internet. Cyberbullying is the use of technology to bully a person or group with the intent to hurt them socially, psychologically or even physically. Cyberbullying can occur in many ways, including abusive texts and emails, hurtful messages, images or videos, imitating others online, excluding others online, humiliating others online, and nasty online gossip and chat.
